Immigration Highlight

[BE] Informed

This past month a university in California was shut down due to immigration fraud. The thousands of international students who decided to go there thought they were getting something good. Extremely low tuition, the ability to take all their classes online and an easy degree seemed too good to be true. It was. Now these international students are without a university and face the real threat of having to return home as they panic to keep their F-1 visas.

Before making any major decision or investing a lot of your money into something it always pays to be informed. This is especially true if someone is trying to sell you something that seems like a real bargain. Do some research online, gather information, and personally visit the business. Remember, if it's too good to be true, it probably is.
